Workshop

Data Sharing in Psycho(bio)logy

ABSTRACT

In the context of the Open Science movement, the benefits of data sharing are clear (e.g., enhanced transparency, reproducibility and collaboration). However, not all researchers may feel comfortable or capable of making their data open access. In this workshop, we will explain current requirements and regulations for data sharing from different perspectives (e.g., the funding agency, ethics and data privacy) in the morning, and offer practical demonstrations and tips by experts in psychological research data management in the afternoon. You will have the unique opportunity to ask questions and exchange experiences with key players in this field. The workshop is specifically tailored to the types of data we deal with in the Department of Behavioural and Cognitive Sciences.

REGISTRATION

This workshop is primarily targeted to post-docs within our department. However, PhD students and professors are also welcome to register. Please be aware that available places are limited, and that preference will be given to post-docs. Remaining places will be allocated on a first-come, first-served basis. When registering, please indicate whether you would like to attend the morning only, the afternoon only, or both.

Please register before 15 October (or ask any questions) by sending an e-mail to:
