

Correction: Experts replacing governments? The socio-cultural and authoritarian roots of citizens' preferences for experts in government in 58 countries

Davide Vittori¹  · Emilien Paulis²

© Springer Nature Limited 2024

Correction to: Acta Politica

<https://doi.org/10.1057/s41269-024-00357-3>

The Funding information section was missing from this article. It should as given below:

Funding

This project has received funding from the European Research Council (ERC) under the European Union's Horizon 2020 research and innovation programme (Grant Agreement No. 773023). Replication materials are available here: <https://osf.io/hn9vm/>

In this article, the wrong figure appeared as Fig. 6; the figure should have appeared as shown below and the original article has been corrected accordingly:

The original article can be found online at <https://doi.org/10.1057/s41269-024-00357-3>.

✉ Davide Vittori
Davide.Vittori@ulb.be Emilien Paulis
emilien.paulis@uni.lu

¹ Université Libre de Bruxelles, Brussels, Belgium

² University of Luxembourg, Esch-Sur-Alzette, Luxembourg

Fig. 6 Main determinants (political interest, institutional trust, socio-cultural ideology, economic ideology, authoritarianism) of support for experts in government in each continent under analysis. Fully specified models are available in the Appendix 6

Publisher's Note Springer Nature remains neutral with regard to jurisdictional claims in published maps and institutional affiliations.

